Providence Conference Draws Sector Leaders to Discuss Creative Placemaking Impacts

Final roster of presenters set for The Art of Placemaking Conference

Providence, RI (October 25, 2013) — WaterFire Providence has the confirmed roster of presenters for The Art of Placemaking Conference which will take place November 7 and 8 at the Omni Hotel in Providence, RI.

Leading practitioners and experts in the field of creative placemaking will meet for two days of exploration and discuss measuring, evaluating and communicating the impact of using art to build and transform community.

The Art of Placemaking presenters include Anne Gadwa Nicodemus and Ann Markusen, co-authors of the 2010 National Endowment for the Arts whitepaper on Creative Placemaking. Anne Gadwa Nicodemus said:

“One of the greatest challenges facing the burgeoning field of creative placemaking is limited opportunities for learning exchange. The Art of Placemaking conference will bring leading practitioners, researchers and funders, from across the country and region together for an intensive three days of discussion and hands-on learning. We’ll give particular focus to a question many are wrestling with—How does one measure and substantiate the impact of creative placemaking initiatives?”

United States Senator Sheldon Whitehouse is scheduled to give the closing keynote.

The National Endowment for the Arts will be represented by Sunil Iyengar, Director, Office of Research & Analysis, and Jason Schubach, Design Director.

Other presenters include Maria Rosario Jackson, Senior Advisor, The Kresge Foundation; Laura Zabel, Executive Director, Springboard for the Arts; Kip Bergstrom, Deputy Commissioner, Connecticut Department of Economic and Community Development; Lyz Crane, Director of Partnerships and Special Projects; Jack Becker, Executive Director, Forecast Public Art; Kimberly Driggins, Associate Director, Citywide Planning Division Office of Planning, Government of the District of Columbia; Barnaby Evans, Founder and Executive Artistic Director, WaterFire Providence; Bert Crenca, Co-Founder and Artistic Director, AS220; Clay Rockefeller, Co-Founder, The Steel Yard; Lynne McCormack, Director of Art, Culture + Tourism, City of Providence, RI; Erin Williams, Cultural Development Officer, City of Worcester; Lori Lobenstine, Youth Action Lead, Design Studio for Social Intervention; Max McCarthy, Executive Director, Upham's Corner Main Street; Randall Rosenbaum, Rhode Island State Council for the Arts executive director; Steven Lubar, Director, John Nicholas Brown Center for Public Humanities and Cultural Heritage, Brown University; Mark Motte, Professor and Director of Geography, Rhode Island College; Marshal Sponder, CEO, WebMetricsGuru INC; Jed Pearsall, President, Performance Research; Sharon Yazowski, Executive Director, Levitt Pavilions; Sarah Lee, Vice President for Arts & Culture, and others to be announced.

For more detailed information on and to register for The Art of Placemaking Conference, please visit <http://conference.placemakers.us>. Organizers strongly advise attendees to book their room at the Omni Providence as soon as possible as hotel rooms in the Providence area will be in short supply due to the popularity of WaterFire's Salute to Rhode Island Veterans on Saturday, November 9, 2013. Reservations can be made by calling 800-843-6664 and ask for the 2013 Creative Placemaking Conference rate (Code: 1106132013CREAT).

The Art of Placemaking Conference is a Creative Placemaking Learning Lab initiative launched by WaterFire Providence as part their 2012 ArtPlace America grant.
